

Child Labor Action Set
For Monday Evening in Surprise Move Today

Republican Assemblyman Makes Statement Designed to Bring Measure Out on Floor for Final Determination.

IVES SURPRISED

Neither Ives Nor Steingut Informed in Advance of Laurens Hamilton's Plan.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 24 (AP).—Final action on ratification of the child labor amendment by New York state next Monday night became assured today when a Republican legislator served notice unexpectedly that he would press for Assembly debate.

Only approval by the Assembly, composed of 76 Republicans and 74 Democrats, is needed to make New York the 28th to ratify, the Democratic-controlled Senate already having acted favorably.

Assemblyman Laurens Hamilton, Rockland county, gave the notice of pressing for action.

"There is no more important piece of legislation before this house than child labor," Hamilton said. "I think it is wise some action is taken. I don't want my party blamed for withholding a vote on such an important resolution. We should express our opinions."

"Accordingly, I shall move next Monday night to discharge the measure from Judiciary Committee and ask for immediate consideration."

Only yesterday, the committee decided to withhold a decision on the resolution until the record of Monday's public hearing is made available for study. Its next meeting is on Tuesday.

Hamilton's action fell like a bombshell in the Assembly chamber.

Neither Republican Floor Leader Irving M. Ives nor Democratic Leader Irwin Steingut had knowledge of the down-state legislator's intentions.

"This is all news to me," Ives said. "Undoubtedly the Judiciary Committee will put it out for a vote any day."

BRISBANE INHERITANCE
TAX TO PAY STATE RELIEF

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 24 (AP).—The New Jersey State Bureau estimated today this state would collect $9,000,000 inheritance taxes on the Arthur Brisbane estate and that the sum would solve the 1937 relief problem.

Brisbane (noted editor who died recently) voted in New Jersey and there isn't any question but that the state is entitled to the inheritance tax on his estate, estimated at $20,000,000 to $30,000,000.

Harry E. Taylor, executive secretary of the State Bureau, said in a statement prepared for a legislative hearing on a proposal to divert highway funds for relief purposes.

TOWNSEND DENIES CONTEMPT

Washington, Feb. 24 (AP).—Dr. Francis L. Townsend, last defense witness, denied today at his trial for contempt of the House that he had planned his sensational "walk out" of a House committee last May before the committee summoned him. Contradicting testimony to that effect by John R. Kiefer, former Townsend aide, yesterday, the California physician said he had made no such plan and had no understanding with other members of his old aid pension organization.

Famous "Hot Potato"

Trig, Feb. 24 (AP).—Central station police held a "hot potato" in the form of a hand grenade today and wondered what they were going to do with it. Temporarily they tucked it away in a clear box. J. Murray, a police officer, found the grenade in his car and decided he "didn't want it to blow up in his hands." So he carried it to headquarters, wrapped in a pair of ski pants.

Winter Really Comes To Northern New York

Poles were flattened and traffic disrupted when real winter weather swept northern New York areas. Here is a typical scene on Scott Road, near Homer, N. Y. (Associated Press Photo)

Some Rain in City,
But 3 Times That
Fell in Mountains

Residents of Kingston were under the impression the city had experienced a severe rainstorm early Monday morning but records kept by the Department of Water, Gas and Electricity of the City of New York indicate that the rain which fell in Kingston was only a "drop in the bucket."

The storm which might be classified as a miniature cloudburst apparently had its origin in the Catskills where rain gauges showed more than three times as much rain fell during the 24-hour period as fell in the city of Kingston.

Low riding storm clouds apparently in passing over the mountains took a path through the upper stretches of Denning, Shandaken and the Tannersville section of Greene county and as they rose in the mountain sections dropped their load of moisture in the form of an exceptionally heavy rainfall. The course of the storm as indicated by the water supply records and the official rain gauge in Kingston shows that the heaviest rain was in the Delaware river, upper Rondout, upper Esopus and Tannersville sections.

At Elka Park where the New York Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity maintains a weather station there fell 3.3 inches of rain during the 24-hour period Sunday. Most of it fell Sunday night and early Monday morning within a few hours. At Tannersville their station showed a rainfall of 3.9 inches. At Poughkeepsie the rainfall was 3.7 inches while but 1.9 inches of rain was recorded at Ashokan. In Kingston the official city gauge showed 1.12 inches.

No weather station is maintained in the Olivera or Woodland valleys or on the Delaware slopes of the mountains but the sudden increase in the flow of streams in those areas indicated an exceptionally heavy rain.

Judge Slater Dies

Bayles of Port Chester, and Dr. M. W. Marr of Pinehurst. The body will be returned to New York for burial.

January collections of $267,482,011 were $23,717,922 over the same 1936 month. These receipts brought government income for the seventh-month period to $2,671,482,732.

Ex-Convict A. Colman Dies

Washington, Feb. 24 (AP).—Ex-convict A. Colman, Yankee candidate and advisor of Walter S. Seligson during Italy's conquest of Ethiopia, died last night. He suffered a breakdown in Europe last year and had been in George Washington Hospital for several weeks. Prisoners Would Pay

Washington, Feb. 24 (AP).—Rep. Walter (D-N.Y.) wants federal prisoners with bank accounts to pay toward Uncle Sam. He said today a prison bureau summary estimates the per capita cost of maintenance at Alcatraz prison in California at $2.94 a day. Before introducing a bill, he was studying the possibility of making prisoners with funds also pay the cost of their apprehension and conviction.

Dunnigan Asks
About Tax Sales

Albany, Feb. 24 (Special).—Action of Senate Majority Leader John J. Dunnigan, Democrat of New York city, temporarily delayed advancement in the Senate Tuesday of the bill of Assemblyman J. Edward Conway, Republican of Kingston, legalizing tax sales of unpaid city taxes for the years 1931 and 1932, in the city of Kingston.

When the bill, which is on the Senate calendar waiting to be advanced to the order of final passage, was read by the clerk of the Senate, Dunnigan asked:

"Just what are we asked to legalize here, what illegality is there to correct? The city of New York has great many holdings up in this area, and we want to know what is going on."

Senator Arthur H. Wickes, Republican of Kingston, who has sponsored the Conway bill in the Upper House, assured Senator Dunnigan that the measure in no way affected the city of New York, and remarked that New York city had no holdings in Kingston.

"The bill was sent to me by the mayor of Kingston," declared Senator Wickes, "and I will communicate with him. In order to supply you with a more complete explanation of the bill."

Relief and Rain Boons to "Spectral" Hordes
Of Three Brazilian States in Record Drouth

Fortaleza, Brazil, Feb. 24 (AP).—Relief and rain fell together today as boons to the "spectral" fabled hordes of three northeastern states where a drouth charred the land.

Reports of the first rainfall since late in 1935 came from the parched areas as word reached here that President Getulio Vargas had made available $660,000 in federal funds to give public works employment to the stricken population of Ceara, Rio Grande do Norte and Alagoas states.

Nearly half of the appropriation was for this state, Ceara, far bordering the other two where periodic rains have given some relief during the past two months. Driven by desperation from their "spectral" fabled hordes, parched by more than a year of drouth, thousands of thirty, hungry families invaded settlements of this state of Ceara today, demanding relief.

Captain Coughlin
Missing, Theory
Offers Drowning

Brooklyn, Feb. 24 (AP).—A search of the Gowanus canal failed today to locate the body of James Coughlin, 52, barge captain of Kingston, N. Y., missing since yesterday.

Police said they abandoned their hunt after dredging the canal without finding a trace of Coughlin.

The barge captain was reported missing yesterday when a brother, William Coughlin, also a barge captain, said he went to see James and failed to find him.

Crew members of other barges tied up nearby said they heard a "splash" yesterday morning and advanced the theory Coughlin might have fallen into the canal.

The barge captained by James Coughlin is owned by Powell & Minnick, Coeymans, N. Y.

HIGHLAND ROAD COMMISSION
ADJOURNS HEARING ONE WEEK

The meeting of the Highland road condemnation commission, scheduled for today, was adjourned one week until Wednesday, March 3, Roscoe V. Elsworth, attorney for the county, being confined to his home with an attack of grip.

An engineer from the state department was to have met with the commission today for questioning regarding certain details of construction which the attorneys have not been able to secure from the road plans at hand. One of these details is the exact nature of the safety strip or parkway which it is understood will separate north and south lanes of traffic, as to what "crossovers" there will be and where they will be located.

SZYMANSKI GOES BACK TO JAIL AFTER EXAMINATION

Stanley Szymanski, who was taken from the county jail to the Kingston Hospital, for examination Monday night, after he had complained of severe pains, was brought back to his cell Tuesday afternoon. Sheriff Molpreux stated that several doctors had examined the youth and had reported that they could find nothing wrong with him.

Szymanski is being held for the grand jury on a charge of burglary in the third degree, it being charged that he was implicated in the theft of furs valued at over $1300 from the warehouse of Alex. Dahl & Son at 34 East Pierpont street early on the morning of February 9.

Theory Investigated
Hired
Western Killers, St. Louis
Gun Used to Slay RedwoodU. S. Inspectors to Study Odell Hull in Effort to Lay Blame

Marlborough, N. Y., Feb. 24 (AP).—Officials of the United States Steamboat Inspection Service said today it might be several days before they could determine all circumstances of a fire that destroyed the steamer Benjamin B. Odell, owned by Samuel Rosoff's Hudson River Night Line.

Hilton F. Rogers, hull inspector, and Nathan H. Dunn, inspector of boilers, said they would have to wait until the hull had thoroughly cooled before they could complete their investigation.

The ship burned Monday night, with a loss estimated by Theodore Hudson, superintendent of the Rosoff Sand and Gravel Company, at $500,000. State Police Sergeant John Lockhart, who also is investigating the fire, said he was reasonably certain that it was incendiary.

Rosoff, millionaire New York city subway builder, asked that guards be placed over his property at Albany, Poughkeepsie and Newburgh after the Odell fire.

Investigation of the fire that destroyed the steamer Benjamin B. Odell, berthed for the winter at Marlborough, on Monday night, is still being made by Sergeant John Lockhart of the state troopers, who is being aided by Inspector Maynard of the B. C. I. of Troop C. A new angle to the investigation has arisen in the report that a mystery auto bearing New Jersey license plates was seen in the vicinity of the Marlborough summer home of Samuel Rosoff, New York subway contractor, and owner of the steamboat company, several hours before fire was discovered on the Odell.

State police who are investigating the fire because of the fight being waged between the subway contractors and "sandhog" union officials and the slaying of R. Norman Redwood, union official, admitted they are investigating the ownership of the reported mystery car.

Inspector Maynard, Sergeant Lockhart, Trooper Lynn Baker and Rosoff's son, Mat, spent more than three hours at the scene of Monday night's fire. They are said to have examined the electric wires which were strung from the power plant on shore to the steamer.

Because the ruins of the steamer were still smoldering yesterday the investigators were unable to venture close to the boiler room.

"Rosoff's son said he is satisfied the fire started by accident," said Sergeant Lockhart last night.

As soon as the ruins have cooled sufficiently the state troopers plan to make a thorough investigation of the burned vessel in an effort to determine definitely just what caused the fire.

SAYS WOMEN COULD BE BETTER FLIERS THAN MEN

West Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 24 (AP).—Women could be better fliers than men, Mrs. Dorothy Brink, attractive young flying instructor, said today, but she added a qualifying statement or two.

"Their reactions are quicker," she said, "but most women have depended on someone else so long that when they find their plane in a tight spot, they think 'Oh, my God, where's somebody to get me out of this!'"

Then, too, she said, "they aren't interested to the extent of spilling their manure to find out what makes the motor go."

Mrs. Brink is one of the few women holding a transport pilot license and also is an instructor. At one time she managed a Rochester, N. Y., airport.

Auto Union After Chrysler

Detroit, Feb. 24 (AP).—The United Automobile Workers addressed to Walter P. Chrysler, president of the Chrysler Corporation, a request today for a "national conference" to work out a collective bargaining agreement.

Their reactions are quicker," she said, "but most women have depended on someone else so long that when they find their plane in a tight spot, they think 'Oh, my God, where's somebody to get me out of this!'"

Pinzarron Hill Is
Objective of Both
Spanish Forces

Madrid, Feb. 24 (AP).—Government Militiamen and an insurgent detachment struggled hand-to-hand today for possession of strategic Pinzarron Hill commanding a vast area of the Jarama River front.

Government forces, after a 20-hour battle, held a large segment of the summit but were blocked from immediate occupation by spraying machine gun fire from a house doggedly held by the insurgents.

Insurgent artillery on Pinzarron Hill has blasted at the Valencia road for days. Domination of this vital highway, running southeast from Madrid, is the immediate objective of Gen. Francisco Franco's offensive in the Jarama River sector.

The thrust of the government troops up the shell-torn slopes was halted by their commanders as "undoubtedly one of the strongest battles in Spanish history. If not the heaviest, it has shown our men have ceased being defenders only and have turned into formidable attackers."

Two advances were executed before the militiamen attained the summit. They opened the way on the first push with grenades and a sweeping fire from rifles and machine guns.

Steadily, seeking cover at every forward step, they attained the crest to be met full in the face by a counterfire of insurgent machine guns.

They fell back, consolidated their death-thinned ranks, and then started the upward movement again. This time they held fast to their gains while enemy bullets dux into the ground around them.

Pinzarron Hill has been heavily fortified by insurgents during the two and one-half week battle of the Jarama River.

About 20 miles southeast of Madrid, near Morata de Tajuna, it stands between the Valencia road and insurgent concentrations along the Jarama river. Previous attacks on its slopes had been beaten back.

If the government could establish artillery at the summit, Madrid's defenders would be able to shell Franco's men just as insurgent gunners have battered at government positions along the Valencia road.

Insurgent artillerymen at the summit duelled with government batteries while the militiamen pushed upward. Shells screamed above the infantrymen as they waged their close range combat.

Other government batteries blasted at the line of insurgent siege lines nearer the city, attempting to divert the besiegers while the Pinzarron Hill charge was taking place and to cover other infantry attacks.

An official bulletin reported that government troops on the Guadarrama Mountain front, about 25 miles to the northwest, and at El Escorial, a sector of the same front, 25 miles from the city, had been attacked by combined artillery and infantry but repulsed the insurgents.

One thousand insurgents were reported to have been killed when militiamen surprised a concentration preparing to attack Turis de Abajo, Abadon and Sacramento, along the Tajuna River, about 60 miles northwest of Madrid.

Siccardi Surmises Gunmen May
Have Flown West from Newark;
Conflicts with Breslin Statements Citing New York Thugs.

12 GUNS TRACED

Redwood's Widow Near Collapse; Rosoff Reports "Very Hot Clue" in Crime.

Hackensack, N. J., Feb. 24 (AP).—A theory that the killers of R. Norman Redwood, New York "sandhog" union leader, were "hired out of the west" and fled by airplane was considered by Bergen county officials today as they followed the trail of the murder gun to St. Louis.

Chief of County Police Peter J. Siccardi surmised it was possible the gunmen drove by car from Teaneck, where Redwood was shot down in front of his home, through Paterson to Newark airport to take a plane back west.

This theory contrasted with previous statements by Prosecutor John J. Breslin, Jr., that the killers were "hired New York gunmen."

Siccardi awaited a report from St. Louis police concerning the sale by a dealer there of a pistol believed to have been used in the slaying. He said he would send a man to St. Louis immediately "if the report turns out as expected."

Friedman Bail $10,000

Common Pleas Judge A. Demarest DeLaur, meanwhile, set bail at $10,000 for Max Friedman, trucking boss for Samuel Rosoff, millionaire New York subway builder, who was arrested Saturday on a material witness complaint and was released later in the day when bail was furnished.

A gun which County Prosecutor John J. Breslin said was one of at least two used in the murder was sent to the Federal Bureau of Investigation in an attempt to raise two-fisted-out digits in the serial number.

12 Guns Traced

Only 12 guns, Siccardi said, could have been fitted into the number combination and 11 had tentatively been determined to be "in good hands."

The 12th, he said, was traced to a St. Louis hardware dealer who sold it in 1931.

Two members of a private crime detection bureau at Elizabeth, N. J., treated the murder gun with acid to bring out numbers which led investigators to trace it to the late Police Chief Carroll Potter of Demarest, near here.

Their report collapsed, Siccardi said, when a gun with the serial number they reported was found in the possession of a state trooper who brought it to the court house.

Widow Near Collapse

Redwood's widow, who has probed investigators to look where she thinks the guilt may lie, and has talked of buying a gun to protect herself, was given a respite from questioning today because of her near-collapse at the burial of her husband.

Two officials of the International Hod Carriers and Building Laborers Union of America were expected to come here voluntarily today for questioning. They were Joseph Morenchi, of Quincy, Mass., president, and James Bove, of the same place, business manager.

Breslin Analyses

Prosecutor Breslin said he wanted to question them about conferences held in New York before Redwood's union went on strike on a sewer construction job on which Samuel Rosoff was the contractor. Redwood's "sandhog" union, Breslin said, was controlled by Morenchi's union.

Prosecutor Breslin, who had Rosoff served in New York with a material witness warrant, said he wanted to question him because witnesses had told that Rosoff threatened to kill Redwood if he ever "pulled a strike" on one of Rosoff's construction jobs. Members of Redwood's "sandhog" union walked out on a Rosoff sewer job the day before Redwood was slain.

Valentine Assigns Five

Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine assigned five New York detectives to investigate the Redwood murder after a conference in New York with Breslin, who previously had asked Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia for six.

Breslin, saying the murder grew out of New York union and labor warfare and was committed by "hired" New York gunmen, said he would be "very ready to help" in the investigation.

He said, "I'm not going to say anything about it publicly. The way anything about it publicly."

Ohioans Could Not Press Murder, Doubt Victims Once Lived

Cleveland, Feb. 24 (AP)—Detectives on an intensive search for the ex-crazed maniac blamed for eight Cleveland torso slayings since September, 1934, questioned a man today concerning the disappearance of twice-married Mrs. Anna Zibert.

After a search of missing persons files, police said she was one of two women most closely resembling the latest victim—whose nude torso covered with surgical stumps, was found late yesterday on the Lake Erie shoreline in Cleveland's east side.

No charges had been placed against the suspect who knew the woman well, detectives said.

The disappearance of Mrs. Zibert, missing since January 15, was reported by her father, Thomas Latkovich. Her physical description and the fact that she was listed as the mother of two children, police said, closely fitted the description given by Coroner Samuel R. Gerber.

Detectives also sought to learn whether Miss Flavia Pillot, 28, who came here from Canton, O., last Friday to stay with her brother, John, could be the eighth victim of the mad slayer.

Miss Pillot vanished, the brother told detectives, after she was reprimanded for coming to Cleveland unannounced.

Police Lieut. William Sargent said the latest torso apparently had not been in the water more than a day or two before it was discovered only a few miles from where Mrs. Zibert, married a second time four months ago, lived.

One previous victim was found at almost the same spot. The mutilated bodies of five others were left in the desolate Kingsbury Run section, several miles away.

The maniac blamed for the eight slayings can be charged only with violation of a health ordinance, Detective Sergeant James Hogan declared today, "even if he confessed."

Although several of the previous seven were identified, Hogan said, no friends or relatives could be found "who could swear from the witness stand that the slain persons had once been living, breathing human beings in good health."

For this reason, he said, no murder charges could now be filed even if the guilty person were captured.

Christmas Cheer Fund Had Balance

The 1936 Christmas Cheer Committee has just filed with Mayor C. J. Heiseleman its report showing the amount of money contributed and the amount expended. The report was somewhat delayed owing to the fact that all of the bills had not been received.

The report shows that the total contributions received from individuals and organizations amounted to $1,360.88 and that the total expenditures for clothing, toys, candy, fruit, etc., amounted to $1,239.08, leaving a balance unexpended of $121.80.

Approximately $900 of the total received was expended for clothing, all of which was purchased in Kingston. In addition to the financial receipts many firms contributed merchandise and supplies.

The Christmas Cheer Committee saw to it that some 1,800 children in Kingston were not forgotten by Santa Claus on Christmas Day.

Portable Transmitter To Speed Up Telemats, The Daily Freeman's News Picture Service

GREATER THAN ANY PARTY

The reception inside Congress and out on the proposal of President Roosevelt to pack the Supreme Court indicates that the question is not a political one. There are as many Democratic as well as Republican critics of the recommendations, while many of the so-called "liberal" leaders will not follow the administration on the plan.

Governor Landon in his recent speech at the National Republican Club in New York city stressed that the issues are greater than any party, that they concern the whole of us and that they are worthy of unhurried deliberation by Congress. The governor might have said "I told you so." He might have reminded his listeners that during the campaign that he and other Republican orators warned them in the event of a New Deal victory in November an effort would be made to get around the Constitution in one way or another. He might have said that charges made then that the Supreme Court would be enlarged after the election in the interest of the New Deal were not discussed by the New Deal orators themselves.

But Governor Landon did nothing of the kind. He realized that this is not the time to engage in political quibbling. He doubtless feels as do many millions of Americans that this Supreme Court issue is not a political question but one which demands calm and careful thought by Americans of all political parties.

IS A JOB PROPERTY?

There is much argument just now as to whether a job is a "property right." Many workmen and friends of labor say it is. Those who say so are disposed to justify workmen in going as far to safeguard their jobs, even by occupying factories, as factory owners themselves would go to protect their properties. "We have discovered in this depression, if we did not know it before," says one writer, "that the job is the most important of all property rights."

This question may grow clearer as we go along. But doubtless in this industrial age, with business aggregations growing steadily larger and personal independence growing steadily less, a job in an office or store or factory may mean as much to an employee as a farmer's land means to him. He may be just as helpless if separated from it. The vast unemployment of the depression years, which is not yet more than half conquered, leaves tens of millions of people with a far greater sense of insecurity and dependence on jobs than they ever had before.

It cannot be overlooked that the present autocratic governments in the Old World, Russia and Germany and Italy for example, hold the loyalty of their people mainly because they provide work for them. The workers may be poorly rewarded—but they have jobs. They do not have to eat their hearts out in idleness, and they feel they will be taken care of somehow, as long as anybody has anything. If we should ever have a revolution in this country, it might come from an overpowering desire, on the part of idle millions, for this sort of security—a guaranteed job as a sort of property right.

PRECIOUS METALS

Our government now has about $11,000,000,000 in gold coins and bullion stored in various places around the country, with the yellow stream still pouring in from Europe. Most of it is being buried underground in Fort Knox, Ky., reasonably safe from any invading enemy coming by sea. With this and in view, most of the treasure has been removed from the vaults in New York, Washington and other coast cities. Likewise most of the gold formerly stored in San Francisco has been moved to Denver, where it is still safer. Apparently there is little thought of danger from air raids, though cover or later precautions will have to be taken against them.

serious problem. As a result of the government's heavy purchases, it now has about $1,000,000,000 in silver bullion. It will soon be two billions. The Treasury is now planning to establish a burial vault for this metal similar to the Kentucky stronghold. Going down the scale of precious metals, we come naturally to nickel and copper. Shall we need safe depositories for them, too? In case of war, copper might be more essential than gold or silver. It would, if other nations should demonetize them.

PERSISTENT SPELLING BEE

An old-fashioned custom which either never went out or has been revived in the spelling match. At least, spelling bees keep cropping out in the news, and contests are held in the most unexpected places. The latest surprise in this line was a match between a 15-man team from Columbia and a 15-woman team from Bucknell University, which was broadcast by radio. Some people suggest that ability to spell is not needed in this day of the radio and the telephone, that clear enunciation and pleasant voice are far more important. Perhaps stenographers and proof readers still need to know how to spell, but they aren't the ones who go in for match spelling, or for any other kind of spelling, if the complaints one hears are justified. It does seem a little queer that after all these years of spelling bees and crossword puzzles there should still be so much mis-spelling in the world.

PAIN OVER HEART

When you read of the large number of individuals who die of coronary thrombosis—blood clot or plug which closes or partly closes the little blood vessel (coronary artery) supplying the heart muscle—you may be surprised to see that the majority of them are men. You have likely been of the opinion that women have more coronary or heart attacks than men, yet except in cases of diabetes and high blood pressure women rarely have coronary disease. Drs. H. Levy and E. P. Ross, in the Journal of the American Medical Association tell us that while real coronary disease is rare, a benign or innocent pain over the heart is very common in women. Women have a great many vasomotor disturbances (when the nerves in the muscles of the blood vessel cause them to dilate and contract or grow larger or smaller). Thus when the little blood vessel contracts or becomes smaller a "spasm" occurs which causes a stoppage or partial stoppage of the flow of blood to the heart. You can thus see that if something upsets the individual a spasm may occur and stop the free flow of blood just the same as if the wall of the blood vessel was diseased and a clot or plug was formed at, or was carried to, a place in the small blood vessel.

Thus while a real clot or plug could be a serious matter causing death, or serious symptoms until it was dissolved or moved away, a spasm, while causing the same symptoms, would not be so serious because rest or certain drugs—amyl nitrite, nitroglycerine—would relieve the spasm and the blood would flow freely through the vessel again.

Now while women are very brave (dentists and physicians both state this to be a fact), nevertheless they are more emotional than men, are more easily upset, and it is emotional upsets that cause these attacks of pain over the heart in women.

Drs. Levy and Ross, of these women, say, "They are emotionally upset, and they are nervous; they complain of palpitation (rapid beating of the heart) and dizziness; they 'shake all over'." Physical examination, the use of the electrocardiograph, and even the X-ray show nothing wrong with the heart or blood vessels feeding the heart.

The treatment consists in trying to remove as many fears or irritations (often domestic) as possible, and showing the patient by examination (including electrocardiogram and X-ray report) that there is nothing wrong with the heart and blood vessels.

Gold was first discovered in the Black Hills region of South Dakota July 27, 1874, at the site of the town of Custer.

Warmer weather moved into the New York state today and rain was forecast to fall on snow frozen hard by the weeks of unusual cold. Masses of snow and ice began to melt slowly in this vicinity as temperatures moved upward.

Karanahoff Elope

MRS. PHELPS returned carrying a small red cabinet decorated with gold. She rested herself again and drew the letters out. They looked as though they might have been written the day before. Bigelow reached for the little packet and examined it.

"But these are dated recently," he said.

"Recently?" repeated his aunt, staring. She leaned over to look.

"How strange! The date looks exactly like the writing, too. But someone must have altered them. Tony Burket has been dead nearly 20 years."

"The chances are they weren't dated at all," said Bigelow, "and he managed to match the ink, somehow, and filled those dates in."

Anne nodded. "That seems to have been a favorite trick of his," she murmured bitterly.

"His? Whose?" cried Mrs. Phelps, looking from one to the other.

"The gentleman we all knew as Vronski," explained Bigelow. "He was blackmailing Anne over these—threatening a scandal involving you."

"Good God—?" gasped Mrs. Phelps. She stared at Anne. Anne flushed.

"I know your writing, you see," she said, "and I couldn't come and ask you about them. And—you'd always been so good to me—"

Tears filled her eyes. Mrs. Phelps threw loving arms around her and drew her close. "And you thought I was really involved in some foolish affair at my age—?" she asked wonderingly.

"I didn't know what to think! I'd never heard of any Tony. And the letters looked so recent—and they were dated! And I said he'd have to go to you if I didn't give him the money he wanted—"

Mrs. Phelps patted Anne's shoulder, still a little bewildered. "My dear child!" she murmured. "But how in God's name did he get the letters in the first place?"

"Doris!" said Bigelow grimly.

"Doris?" Mrs. Phelps looked at him. "She must have got them and sold them to him," said Bigelow. "She had access to them, hadn't she?"

"She is the only one in the house who had," agreed the old lady, "and Walters frequently warned me she wasn't to be trusted, but she was so useful!"

"Was?" repeated Bigelow.

"Yes, she was a holiday. I let her go several days ago."

"Well, that disposes of her, at any rate," said Bigelow. "I hardly think she will come back."

"Making a Belt For It?"

ANNE looked up at Bigelow anxiously. "Don't you think we might telephone Karanahoff now?" she asked.

"Yes," said Bigelow. "Why not? It she is still sleeping, Mariushka will tell you."

Anne left the room just as Walters came in with the first dish of waffles.

"Don't wait," said the old lady. "I know Anne won't mind." She went to serve Bigelow from the silver platters Walters and the second "man" were placing before her. "Be careful of those plates, my dear. They are very hot. . . . I simply cannot imagine how Anne could have believed for a moment—! But of course, there was no writing and the dates. And women do foolish things—even women of my age! But I should not have believed that anyone who knew me as well as Anne—!" She shook her head helplessly as she gave Walters the plate.

As Walters set it before Bigelow, Anne came back.

"What?" Bigelow looked up in astonishment.

"Went out in the early hours of the morning and didn't leave a forwarding address."

Bigelow whistled softly. "Do you suppose she's making a bolt for it?"

"Looks like it," said Anne. She sat down in her place.

"But why should Madame Karanahoff run away?" asked Mrs. Phelps.

Bigelow began to tell her. In the midst of this the bell rang and Walters ushered in Austrelitz.

"I've come to breakfast. I hope there is enough," he said. "I telephoned our young friend, here, and when I couldn't reach him, I guessed that he'd be here."

"Some more breakfast for Dr. Austrelitz," beamed Mrs. Phelps, dividing her smile between the doctor and Walters. Walters slipped away, as the doctor sat down.

"I've had a letter from Karanahoff," said Austrelitz. "That's evidently what she meant last night when she said I would hear from her today. She says she's eloping to Canada with Woody Taylor by plane and that they plan to sail from there for France."

"Good Lord!" gasped Bigelow. "Won't the police stop them?"

"They may not trace them. Woody Taylor has his own plane. And if they call on Mr. and Mrs. Woodward Taylor, the police may not realize that Mrs. Woodward Taylor is Karanahoff. And once she gets to France, they may not be able to extradite her on the evidence they have."

"After her great success, last night, will cause some excitement," said Mrs. Phelps.

"Yes, I suppose the papers will simply discover that she has disappeared," said Anne.

"Was that all she said in the letter?" asked Bigelow.

"No. She said she had destroyed the photographs and the rest of the letters. And she enclosed a statement admitting her guilt in the Vronski case, but she places me on my honor not to turn it over to the police unless Dryden is found guilty of the murder."

"I hope he's acquitted," said Anne, "and that she finds happiness with Woody. I don't think she's ever been very happy."

"No," admitted Austrelitz. He sighed and began on the plate that Walters set before him.

"Whatever happens, now," said Anne slowly. "It looks as if we're clear. I take it she doesn't implicate us in her statement?"

"No," answered Austrelitz. "She simply says she shot him and allows it to be inferred that she shot him at his own apartment after the party in the studio. The statement doesn't agree with the findings of the medical authorities who examined Vronski's body, but I don't think they'll squabble about a little thing like that—if ever they see her statement."

Bigelow's Mission

"WELL," said Anne, "in that case, I think—when you gentlemen finish eating—I'll have a nice warm bath and a long nap. I really believe, for the first time since all this began, I shall be able to sleep."

Bigelow smiled at her.

"And you, I suppose, will begin to think about returning to Paris?" said his aunt, regarding him affectionately.

"It's charming in Paris in the spring," he admitted wistfully.

"And you've accomplished what you came over to do," she added.

"What have I come over to do?" asked Anne, curiously. "What was that—if it's not a secret?"

"Why—I wrote to him," explained Mrs. Phelps, "about your infatuation for Vronski—I thought you were infatuated, you know—and that I didn't trust the man and was frightfully worried—and he came to see what he could do about it."

"Oh!" said Anne.

"After all," went on the old lady, "you are almost cousins."

"Quite," said Anne. She colored slightly but did not reveal whether she was pleased or displeased with the news. And as Austrelitz helped himself again from the platter Walters offered "invitingly," she said, "If you'll excuse me, I'll leave you to it."

"I'll phone you later," called Bigelow, as they rose.

"Do," said Anne.

Willy Nilly Acts

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

HIS picture was in the paper, together, "I took it there so quickly that I hardly noticed anything."

"You can't read! Don't pretend you're any brighter than you are," cackled Top Notch.

"I'm glad you admit I'm bright," grinned Christopher Columbus Crow.

"But I did notice that the man was looking at a picture."

"Yes, the boy's picture was in the paper and his name and everything about him. But it took a long time for the news to come forth as the boy where he was taken was so far away that boats only stop there once in a very long time," said Willy Nilly.

"Now I'm going to get to the nearest village as soon as I can. I must have help with this," he added.

"Why not go to that little town where they have that newspaper and the people who came once and took our pictures—the time the flyers landed here?" suggested Christopher Columbus Crow.

"The snow doesn't amount to anything now. I believe I can use my automobile Two-Ways."

Willy Nilly did a few repairs on his car and then he was off.

It was not such a very long while before Willy Nilly was back, and walking up the rough, half-snowy, half-bumpy roads of Puddle Muddle were a man, a black dog and two geese.

"Willy Nilly!" cried the man. He could not say another word. Words were in his thoughts, in his heart, but he just couldn't get one more out. But Willy Nilly understood.

YOUR INCOME TAX.

NO. 27

Deductions For Tax on Motor Gas

If an automobile is used for both business and pleasure, all of the maintenance and operating expenses connected therewith, which constitute allowable deductions for Federal income-tax purposes, should be allocated to the two uses on the basis of the time that it is used for each. For example, if the total expense of operation and maintenance, plus depreciation, for the taxable year amounted to $300, and the car was used three-fourths of the time for business and the balance of the time for pleasure, the allowable deduction for Federal income-tax purposes would be $600.

If a law which imposes a tax on gasoline shows that the tax is imposed on the consumer and not on the dealer, the consumer may deduct as a tax for Federal income-tax purposes, the amount of the gasoline tax paid by him; but the taxpayer must have kept records of the payment of such taxes in order that the deduction may be substantiated as is required by the law and the regulations. The Federal gasoline tax is not deductible by the consumer. A taxpayer may ascertain whether the gasoline tax imposed by a state is deductible by the consumer or by the dealer by addressing an inquiry to the collector of internal revenue for his district.

In any case where the gasoline purchased is used for business purposes the tax may be added to the cost of the gasoline and deducted as a business expense; but where that is done, the gasoline tax cannot be deducted separately under the item of taxes.

A Washington Daybook

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON—Senators Barkley of Kentucky and Bulkley of Ohio accepted the President's nation-wide power authority program by shoving ahead a bill to stress food control and minimize power.

Senator Norris of Nebraska, to whom the power industry and business skulduggery are almost synonymous terms, went to the White House a few days ago to talk power with the President. Both have advocated a series of set-ups like TVA to cover all the country but seemingly agreed that actual legislation would await a report by the President's latest power committee, headed by Secretary Ickes.

Barkley already had introduced an Ohio valley authority bill but on a visit to the White House he learned of the nation-wide plan to link power, food control, and navigation. Fearful the hotly fought power issue would hamper food legislation, he conferred quickly with Barkley, whose state also has food troubles.

The result was their measure to set up seven new authorities covering all of the United States not already blanketed by TVA. But unlike in TVA, power was subordinated. Bulkley was frank about it, saying Ohio needed no water power as it had plenty of coal.

The Norris-White House bill likely will be along later.

Red Rider

THERE is an interesting sidelight on the "red rider," now in process of repeal or sharp modification. The red rider prohibited teaching of communism in the District of Columbia. Before a teacher could receive pay, he had to sign a slip saying that during the month covered by his pay check he had not taught communism.

All that rignarole affecting hundreds of teachers gumbled up the works in the District disbursing office. To get around it, the red rider slips were circulated among the teachers early each month. Along about the second or third of January, say, the teacher would sign a slip saying he had taught no communism during January.

That avoided the bookkeeping tangle but at the same time left the teacher technically free to teach communism to his heart's content during the rest of January. However, it seems nobody was bold enough to, and whatever Washington's youngsters learned of the Russian government during the past two years was learned outside the school rooms.

The national storm and strife aroused over the red rider may have discouraged congress from using Washington as a governmental guinea pig for trying out somebody's pet legislation. Its strange, too, for a person would think Washington, of all places, would be a safe spot to fiddle with, since nobody much can vote or stir up thunderback back in the congressman's home district.

Tom Blanton, former representative from Texas and author of the red rider, however, blamed the fuss over it for his defeat last fall.

Probing Technique

THE house has voted to block senate investigation committees (as well as its own, of course) from using departmental employees in its far-reaching inquiries, but it made no effort to cut off the President from drawing on the departments for whatever assistance he may need.

As passed by the house, the independent offices appropriation bill provided: "Employees of the executive departments and other establishments of the government may be detailed from time to time to the office of the President . . . for such temporary assistance as may be deemed necessary."

County

"Y Night" Speaker

The introduction of a new idea, a "Y Night" for members of the Ulster County Christian Endeavor Union, will take place this week Wednesday at 8 o'clock at the Y. M. C. A. This city, through the cooperation of Robert L. Sisson, general secretary. The committee announces the speaker as the Rev. Goodrich Gates, who will talk on "The Place of Young People in the World Today." Over 100 Endeavorers have signified their intention of participating in this event, which will include a swim, a dance in the gym from 9 to 10 o'clock, and then a meeting in the upstairs rooms with a speaker, refreshments and a social hour. All Endeavorers are welcome.

County Meeting

The regular meeting of the executive officers of the Ulster County Union will be held on Monday evening, March 1, at 8 o'clock, at the home of Miss Beatrice Powley, 189 Highland avenue. All officers of the Union, and presidents of the various societies are asked to make a special effort to be present.

Easter Vesper Service

The annual Easter Vesper Service sponsored by the County Union again will take place on the year's program, but a definite place has not been selected. However, the service will take the form of an Easter play entitled, "The Resurrection," by Marcus L. Bach. Members of the organization who will take part are: Frances Rosa, Carolyn Ryder, Donald Smith, Henry Eighner, Mary Langwick, and Lee Powell. The public is cordially invited; announcement of the church will be made.

The WORLD of STAMPS

By Quinton James.

Velasquez, the great Spanish painter, and Isabella, the queen who who backed Columbus on his voyage of discovery are pictured on two new stamps from the government presses at Madrid.

The portrait of the artist and his autograph (Diego de Silva Velasquez) decorate a 50-centavo stamp printed in blue. The queen's head appears on a 30-c red stamp.

Born in Seville, Velasquez (1599-1660) became attached to the court of Philip IV. He painted religious, historical and court subjects and is considered the head of the Spanish School of Painting. Today his pictures are treasured in famous galleries of Europe and the United States. He helped lay the foundations of modern painting.

Isabella the Catholic (1451-1504) was queen of Castile and Leon. She was known for her clear intellect, resolute energy and unselfish patriotism. And her character exerted a great moral influence over the Castilian court which had been pretty bad until she came. She was very pious and had strong religious convictions.

But her greatest claim to fame is that she listened to Columbus' plans and financed his adventurous voyages, offering to pawn her jewels if the treasury funds fell short.

Many overprints on current issues have also been coming out of Spain.

Rare Jubilee Shade.

A young London collector walked into a North London post office to buy a 2½-penny stamp of the George V jubilee design. He thought the color—normally ultramarine—seemed to be an off-shade, so he bought the entire sheet and others of the same hue for about $25.

Thereupon, so the story goes, he sold the lot to a syndicate for $25 apiece, making a net profit of about $7,500. Since then the price of this variety has risen considerably. In a recent Bond street sale it was quoted at $250.

Early U. S. Letter Sheet.

The only U. S. letter sheet listed in the catalogue until this year was the 2-cent Grant issue of 1866. Now another has been recognized and added.

It was printed in 1861 and bears the 3-cent Washington head impression of the type then used on envelopes. The stamp's color is pink and the sheet is of blue paper in both letter and note paper size. First issued in August, 1861, this letter sheet was withdrawn in April, 1864.

Danish Windmill.

The Windmill of Orskov, one of Denmark's famed landmarks, supplies the design for a charity issue from that country. The national flag appears in the background, and the only inscriptions are "Denmark" and "Orskov".

Each of the three denominations—10-cent green, 10-cent brown and 15-cent red—bears a surtax of 5 øre. These stamps were issued also in booklet form.

University Professor, Unprepared. Tells Scholars Why. Rochester, Feb. 24. (AP)—For once it was the teacher, not the student, who was unprepared.

But, as Professor Wilbur Dings-well explained to his surprised public speaking class at Rochester University, the reason was "fairly obvious."

Turning to the attractive young woman who had entered the classroom on his arm, the professor said: "I got married yesterday."

When a Little Means So Much
I wonder if you've ever thought what small amount could be the difference between deep grief and satisfying gloom.
Here's my discovery—and you'll agree, when I present the facts; the difference can be as little as one cent.
A loved one waits for word from you—when you are far apart.
Would you let someone suffer, when one cent could ease the heart?
No grief compares to doubt—and fears—for those who've gone away.
So, won't you send, at least, a card to that loved one today!

Grandpa—And what is a hypocrite?
Junior—A boy who goes to school with a smile on his face.

There is a much better market for smiles than frowns.

Hubby—I don't know what Bill Smith does with his money. He was short yesterday and he is short again today.

Wife—Is he trying to borrow from you, dear?
Hubby—No, hang it! I wanted to borrow from him.

Books on etiquette are painfully silent concerning a graceful way to scratch a mosquito bite in public.

Glady—I'm afraid you aren't as pretty as nurse.
Mother—What makes you think so, dear?

Glady—We've been walking in the park a whole hour, and not a single policeman has said, "Hello, baby, how's nurse?"

Nine times out of ten the golfer you see carrying the biggest bag of clubs is the biggest dub on the green.

Father—Don't feel badly, Junior. Your sister is better now and soon will be out of bed.

Junior—I know it, and now she will be eating all the things herself that people bring for her.

The young man who has a coffee and doughnut breakfast down town in a quick and dirty lunch room, and eats a delicatessen dinner out of a paper bag, when he gets home in the evening, nine times out of ten, married some fool girl because she was a good dancer.

There is a big demand for the things we do to bad.

She—You've been drinking whiskey!
Amateur Distiller—Thank you!

There is nothing that makes a man quite so sore as for a salesman to hand him a soft hat and tell him it matches his head.

Woman—Has your husband a good car for miles?
Friend—I'm afraid not. He seems to think everything he hears played in a church is a lullaby.

Men can look ahead much better when their vision isn't obstructed by a lot of unpaid bills.

Fussy Passenger (aboard ship)—Doesn't this boat tip a lot, steward?
Steward—Yes, she's setting a good example for the passengers. Thank you, sir.

America has become great because our forefathers toiled. They achieved through individual effort. This nation was built on a foundation of hard work. We shall continue to prosper as we continue to work, instead of believing that government owes us a living.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By Robin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—A new "second generation" of actors steps up on the Hollywood horizon.
Some of them were youngsters in pinafors or short pants when the now famous Bennett sisters, Doug Fairbanks, Jr., Noah Berry, Jr., et al., were being heralded as likely prospects for carrying on theatrical dynasties.
But the years march on, and here we have a pretty 19-year-old named Mary Rogers, no longer knocking but well inside the gates. When Will was alive, Mary got by the studio gatekeeper and won a job under an assumed name. After that—whether Rogers decided it or Mary did—she went into stock training in the east, and recently returned to sign a contract.
Walthall, Hopper And Holt
Two more famous names—Walthall and Hopper—are being perpetuated on the screen by a daughter and son, respectively, Patricia Walthall, daughter of the late Henry B., and William Hopper, son of Hedda and the late DeWolf, arrived on the Warner lot to sign contracts almost simultaneously.
They were just a little later in that respect than Tim Holt, strapping son of the veteran Jack, who was grabbed by Walter Wagner, Allen Brook, over at Columbia, is regarded as a good possibility. Before they changed his title, he was Joe Allen, Jr., son of the stage comic.
Lenore Bushman, a "second generation" of some years back, rejoins the ranks currently in "Maytime" and "The Last of Mrs. Trenchard." She has been off the screen playing wife and mother exclusively. Her brother Ralph's film work has been consistent although he has yet to hit the bright lights. Both are children of the one-time matinee idol, Francis C. Bushman who, as the wife will have it, has gone "from ham to hamburger." (He operates a barbecue stand.)
Famous Parents Help
And then these names appear, more or less frequently, in current cast lists: Barbara Denny, Bryant Washburn, Jr., Julie Cabane (daughter of Christy Cabane), William Tannen and Carlyle Blackwell, Jr. Alice Moore, daughter of Alice Joyce and Tom Moore, signed a contract but has not been seen importantly.
Whether it's easier to crash the screen with a screen-famous papa or mama remains a moot question. Most of the youngsters indignantly refuse to "trade" on parental names even when the names still mean something.
But it undoubtedly helps, say, in the preliminaries such as getting interviews with casting directors.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

Societies Clubs Personals

Atharhacton Club

The Atharhacton Club met yesterday afternoon with Mrs. Cornelius Treadwell to decide the program for the coming year. The members voted to continue the study of the novel and its developments since the World War. "Queen Victoria," a biography by Lytton Strachey, was reviewed by Mrs. Treadwell. Preceding the meeting the hostess served afternoon tea at which Miss Emily Hoystradt acted as guest of honor. The club will meet next week with Miss Ethel M. Hull at her home on Smith avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Herzog, Janison Fowler and Raymond Garrahan returned yesterday on the S. S. Champlain from a two weeks' cruise to the West Indies.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ulmer of Mt. Vernon were week-end guests of Jay Terry and his daughter, Mrs. William Shuler, of Albany avenue.

Lowell Club

Mrs. Rose K. Witter entertained the Lowell Club yesterday at her home on Fair street. Before the program, notice was read concerning the death of Mrs. Frank Powley, an honorary member of the club. The first paper on "Noel Coward" was read by Mrs. James Guttridge who reviewed the life and works of the dramatist.

Mrs. W. N. Fessenden summarized the stage and screen play, "Cavalade," and read many of the more interesting selections from the script. The history of the Ben Greet Company, a group of famous English actors, was interestingly given by Mrs. William Longyear. Ben Greet, the manager of the company, was born on the Thames river on a ferrying boat, of which his father, William Greet, was the captain. At the age of 22 Ben Greet joined a stock company and played important parts in at least 300 plays. The members of his company toured America from 1902-1918. Ben Greet was instrumental in obtaining permission for the school children of London to attend Shakespearean plays presented by his company. He was also instrumental in establishing a permanent English theatre for the classics in Paris. The Ben Greet Company has obtained renowned eminence. The members were pioneers of the famous Pastoral plays in London in 1886. The company for 48 years has given Shakespearean or doors using stage properties similar to the original production.

The last paper was read by Mrs. M. S. Conklin who reviewed the life of Eva Le Gallienne up to the present in a pleasing, interesting and informative manner. The club will meet next week with Mrs. James A. Guttridge at her home, 15 Irving Place.

James G. Connelly, who has been spending a few days at his home, 65 West O'Reilly street, has returned to his studies at Fordham Law School in New York.

Birthday Party

The 53rd birthday of Milton Mills was celebrated at his home in North Lomontville Saturday night, February 20, with a party which was attended by his relatives and friends. He showered him with congratulations and presents. There was music and singing on the program of merriment, and sandwiches and cake were served at midnight, after which the guests left for home wishing Mr. Mills many more happy birthdays.

College Club Scholarship Speaker

General John F. O'Ryan, well known lecturer, has been secured by the Kingston Women's College Club as the speaker for the annual scholarship fund meeting on Tuesday, March 2. General O'Ryan has chosen as his subject "The Outlook for American Life". The lecture, which will begin at 8:15 o'clock, will be held at the Fair Street Reformed Church. Miss Grace Mac Arthur, Mrs. Bertha Denniston and Mrs. John L. Mac Kinnon are the committee arranging for the lecture. Tickets may be secured from any member of the club.

As in the past, all proceeds from General O'Ryan's lecture will be contributed to the club's scholarship fund. In June the club will award its $100 scholarship to a girl of the senior class at Kingston High School who, without such help, would find it difficult to continue her education.

About The Folks

Thomas J. Riffenbary, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jay W. Riffenbary, 279 Albany avenue, is mentioned on the club's list for high scholarship during the first semester at Union College, Schenectady. Students receiving a grade of B or better in all their courses qualify for this honor which entitles them to special privileges. Riffenbary, a freshman, is pursuing studies which lead to a Bachelor of Arts degree. He prepared to enter law at Kingston High School.

Mrs. Emma C. Harton, Miss Catherine Smith and Miss Shirley Smith, all of New Paltz, were entertained at

A real treat is in store for music lovers of Kingston. The Choir of All Saints Cathedral of Albany will give a concert Tuesday evening, March 16, under the sponsorship of the Men's Club of the Fair Street Reformed Church. The concert will be held in the Fair street church.

Kingston is fortunate in securing this group of men and boys for an appearance in the city. They sing under the direction of the noted conductor, Prof. J. William Jones, whose reputation is well known throughout the East. Although Prof. Jones is an organist of note, all singing is done a capella.

Early in April this choir will go on tour covering many large cities in the East. The itinerary at present calls for a concert at the White House in Washington, D. C.

Catskill Glee Club Concert

Following the banquet, the guest speakers, the Rev. John J. Manning of St. Joseph's Church and Lillian A. Dyer of Newburgh, district deputy, gave inspiring talks. Marie Ulrich, grand regent of the local order, welcomed the guests. Mrs. Hazel Baker was toastmaster.

The Rev. W. P. F. Dooley gave the benediction and blessing and Mrs. Margaret T. Shultis and Miss Jane Madden gave the history of the local court since its institution. Solos were sung during the evening by Mrs. Marie Reiser and Martin Kelly. Officers present were Marion Tunney, vice grand regent; Nora Becker, prophetess; Alice Britt, financial secretary; Sabina Howley, historian; Mary Connelly, treasurer; Marie Costello, monitor; Amelia Duto, sentinel; Cecelia Pillsworth, lecturer, and Juanita Callahan, organist. Father Manning's address was listened to with marked attention by the 125 members present. The speaker warned against compromise with modern philosophies that the church finds in error, particularly the modern doctrines concerning marriage and family life. "If you as Christians and Catholics sit back without concern for the future, you will be responsible for the failure of Christian Catholic civilization," he stated.

Official Study

Some 35 employees of the Century Wallpaper Mills at Decatur, Ill., entrenched themselves in the plant and defied a court order for their evacuation. A move to forcibly eject the strikers was held in abeyance pending action by state conciliators.

An agreement for a wage increase ended a short-lived strike of 400 employees of the Detroit Radio & Television Corporation at Detroit. A wage adjustment also ended the Star Terminals Transfer Company's strike involving 30 workers in the same city. Three other strikes were settled but a half dozen continued.

Meyer Pleads to Killing School Girl

West Chester, Pa., Feb. 24 (AP)—Through his attorney, Alexander Meyer pleaded guilty today to the murder of Helen Meyer, 16-year-old high school student, and was ordered held without bail for court. Meyer's attorney, J. Paul McElree, handed Justice of the Peace H. Jones Patrick a statement that "with the entry a plea admitting guilt, the law has been vindicated. At a proper time the court will fix the punishment."

While this statement was interpreted by some county authorities as meaning that McElree intended to ask that the case be placed in the hands of a judge to fix the degree of guilt and the penalty, the attorney said he could not state at this time what action he would take. Meyer was present at the hearing, but did not speak and was not questioned.

The girl, a sophomore at the Coatesville High School, disappeared on February 11 while walking to her home at Modena, three miles to the south. Last Saturday Meyer was arrested. He gave police a statement that he deliberately ran the girl down with his truck, attacked her and threw her body in a well on an abandoned farm near his father's farm close to Downingtown.

Two Block Action On Retirement Bill

Washington, Feb. 24 (AP)—Objections by Senators King (D-Utah) and McNary (R-Ore.) blocked action in the Senate today on legislation which would permit Supreme Court justices to retire voluntarily at 70 with full pay.

The retirement bill, which already has been passed by the House, has been approved by President Roosevelt although it is not a part of his broader program for ousting "new blood" into the high tribunal.

The measure came up during consideration of bills on the calendar requiring unanimous consent for their approval. Both King and McNary objected. King has expressed opposition to the President's program.

A moment later, Senator McCarran (D-Nev.) attempted to move to take up the bill, but McNary, the Republican leader, contended the motion was not in order.

The Nevada senator is expected, however, to get the court bill up tomorrow or the next day.

Strikes Continue In Country Over Wide Spread Area

(By The Associated Press.)

Strikes at opposite ends of the nation—Groton, Conn., and Santa Monica, Calif.—curtailed production of United States government marine and air craft today.

Many other strikes, most of them scattered points in the nation. Settlement of some was almost immediately followed by new labor disputes.

More than 300 sit-down strikers occupied the Douglas Aircraft Company plant at Santa Monica where company officials said, contracts for government airplanes involved $19,000,000 of a $24,000,000 construction program.

Seniority rights, wage increases and recognition of the United Automobile Workers of America Union were demands set forth in circulars passed to 5,600 employees. Sit-downers ignored a request by the firm's president to leave the plant "to avoid trouble."

State troopers evicted sit-down strikers from the Electric Boat Company plant at Groton, arresting about 80 who refused to evacuate. Government submarines are under construction at the plant. Company officials secured warrants charging trespassing and said all strikers had been discharged. The strike started after a dispute over union recognition.

Sit down strikers who union leaders said numbered 500 curtailed operations at the Crowell Publishing Company in Springfield, O. The striking pressmen sought increased wages and union recognition.

A strike of shoe factory workers at scores of New England firms was called by the United Shoe and Leather Workers Union, which sought an immediate 15 per cent wage increase. Many concerns announced they would agree to the new pay scale.

Governor Henry Horner of Illinois made virtually no progress toward settlement of the sit-down strike at the Fawcett Metallurgical Corporation of North Chicago. He conferred with contending parties separately when company officials refused to treat with representatives of the committee for industrial organization.

Some 35 employees of the Century Wallpaper Mills at Decatur, Ill., entrenched themselves in the plant and defied a court order for their evacuation. A move to forcibly eject the strikers was held in abeyance pending action by state conciliators.

Extension Course In Social Studies Begins Thursday

The New York University extension courses, sponsored by a committee including the various school superintendents of Ulster county, were a decided success for the first term and the second term of the course in educational sociology has already begun with a large enrollment of teachers from Kingston, Saugerties, Kerkira, Highland, Walkkill, Poughkeepsie and other sections of the county. These are all regular university credit courses and bear the same credit as though taken at New York University on the campus in New York city.

On Thursday evening, February 25, the second term in the class in social science for teachers will begin. There is a great need for this course for teachers who must follow the new state syllabus in social studies and the present tendency in education is to correlate subject matter in order to show the relation of one subject to the other. Integration is the modern idea in education and teachers who are not sufficiently informed cannot serve their classes to the best advantage.

Kingston is fortunate in being able to secure the services of Dr. Charles M. Gill as the instructor of the class in social studies. Dr. Gill has come through the mill from the class room to superintendence of schools and is now head of his department in the School of Education of New York University. He will endeavor to fit his course to the needs of each individual teacher in his class.

Thursday night is registration night at Kingston High School at 7 o'clock. It is the first session of the second term and new entrants should see either Dr. Gill or Mr. Service, the secretary, before the opening hour.

Fire Board Buys New Car for Chief

The Board of Fire Commissioners meeting at the Central Fire Station Tuesday evening decided to purchase a Buick sedan to replace the present car used by Fire Chief Joseph J. Murphy. The board accepted the bid made by Kingston Buick, Inc. It was also decided to purchase 1,000 feet of hose for the paid fire department.

The board devoted some time to discussing proposed changes and improvements to the fire alarm system and an estimate of the cost was filed with the board. No definite action was taken.

Several routine matters were also disposed of and the board then adjourned.

Vincennes Commissioned

Boston, Feb. 24 (AP)—The new 10,000-ton U. S. cruiser Vincennes, described by the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation as "one of the finest and most efficient" of new naval vessels, was commissioned today at the Boston Navy Yard. The cruiser, 375 feet long and carrying a main battery of nine eight-inch guns and a secondary battery of eight six-inch guns, was placed in command of Capt. Burton H. Green.

The board accepted the bid made by Kingston Buick, Inc. It was also decided to purchase 1,000 feet of hose for the paid fire department.

The board devoted some time to discussing proposed changes and improvements to the fire alarm system and an estimate of the cost was filed with the board. No definite action was taken.

Several routine matters were also disposed of and the board then adjourned.

Waiting for a speedboat to take them across Hamilton Harbor in Bermuda is a much healthier and more enjoyable holiday stunt than attempting to celebrate Washington's birthday by crossing the ice-choked Potomac in a rowboat. Cruise and warmer weather wear for Father and Son, Inc., is here presented. If you can't follow the sun right now, make mental notes on these outfits for summer when it arrives. The lad wears a suit of natural gabardine, with youthful color breaking out in his neckwear and horizontally striped socks. Red rubber soles on his white buck shoes are also a sporting touch. He could well change outfits with "the pater" whose slightly thinning hair necessitates a medium brown snap-brim hat as protection against the sun. A darker brown is the sports jacket of bold bound's tooth check. Three buttons on the jacket, along with side vents, are proper for nonchalance. A natural linen shirt with club-striped linen tie also looks cool. White flannels are always correct, as are the brown trimmed buck shoes.

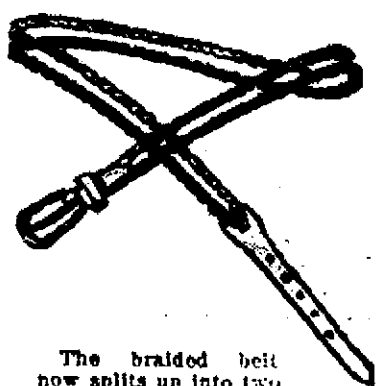

Gray flannel slacks, of very roomy proportions, are adaptable for belt support or, in higher cut models, with simple cloth buckle adjustments at the waist.

Shetland, because of its luxurious softness, is unrivalled for comfort in a sports jacket—in plain shades or, even bolder with the fast overplaid illustrated.

A new model golf shoe with brass fitting in the detachable spikes, insuring no rust or trouble in removing them when leaving the links. The spike positions on the sole were chosen after studying actual golfing stances, so that no slipping could unbalance the follow-through.

The braided belt now splits up into two strands in contrasting colors. Black and white or brown and white, are good belts for general sports wear.

Most popular sports shirt is the Gaucho model. While this is a solid color flannel, other fabrics are smartly adaptable in the long-sleeved model here illustrated.

Another "softer than soft" necessary is this pure cashmere slipover sweater. So light in weight you'll forget you're wearing it, but so smart that others won't.

BUT, with this newspaper as your salesman, you can reach 40,000 people every day throughout the year! And advertising space costs infinitely less than it costs to maintain a staff of wage-earners! Opposition Sees Enough Votes Soon To Beat Court Bill

Washington, Feb. 24 (AP)—Senate opponents of President Roosevelt's court program said today, after Senator Tydings (D-Md.) joined their ranks, that "enough votes to defeat the bill are in sight."

They did not claim sufficient votes already were committed but insisted they had enough to "stop" the bill by holding it up in the Judiciary committee or preventing a final Senate vote.

Administration forces contended they had enough votes to pass the bill, but their immediate attention was centered on enacting during the next day or two the voluntary retirement bill for Supreme Court Justices.

This bill, approved by Mr. Roosevelt but not an integral part of his broader program for putting "new life" into the bench, was expected to meet little opposition. It provides full pay for justices who wish to leave the high court at 70.

Senator Pittman (D-Nev.) served notice, however, he would renew the unsuccessful fight he made in committee to eliminate the section submitting retired justices to be on call for service in lower courts.

Senator McCarran (D-Nev.), in charge of the bill, said he would call it up either today or tomorrow, depending on developments in the debate over the reciprocal tariff law.

Commitments unchanged.

Despite the conflicting claims of opposing leaders on the President's proposal to enlarge the Supreme Court, public commitments showed little change.

Senator Tydings' declaration raised the opposition ranks to 33. On the other side were 22, with the balance still non-committal.

Privately, administration leaders said they had 48 votes; the opponents claimed 42. The senate has 96 members.

The claim to have enough votes "in sight" to defeat the program came from Senator Burke (D-Neb.). He said there was a notable "stiffening of the opposition ranks" in the face of Mr. Roosevelt's insistence on enactment of the bill.

Both sides expect an endurance contest when senate debate opens unless there are unexpected developments.

If one or more justices should leave the bench after enactment of the retirement bill, however, some senators expressed the belief the reorganization measure might not be pushed.

Brief History of Steamer B. B. Odell

Famous Old River Craft Was Destroyed by Fire at Marlborough on Monday Night—Was Launched in 1910 and For Years Was Flagship of Old Central Hudson Line.

The steamer Benjamin B. Odell, destroyed by fire Monday night at Marlborough, was launched in the shipyard of the Marlan and Hollingsworth Corporation on the Christiane river at Wilmington, Delaware, on December 3, 1910, just 27 years ago, and for years she was the flagship of the old Central Hudson Line that was later absorbed by the Hudson River Steamboat Company, and still later by the Hudson River Navigation Company. The famous old steamer was named after Governor Odell of New York state, who was a famous resident of Newburgh.

Governor Odell's daughter, Estelle, christened the boat in the presence of notable personages in the shipping world and a party of Newburgh residents.

The Odell in 1924 was converted from a coal to an oil burner. Throughout her career the Odell because of the strong construction and special lines was used for opening traffic between central Hudson ports and New York city.

In this and other work she had many narrow escapes from being wrecked. In January, 1925, she was lost for more than a day in a fog off Ossining. In 1934 she was disabled at her dock in Albany when she hit a submerged object in the river off Hamburg. In 1928 she collided with the ferry Highland off Poughkeepsie.

But in none of these accidents was she ever materially damaged.

Last year she was laid up for the winter and berthed at Marlborough. The Odell measured 280 feet in length with an extreme width of 50 feet and drew 16 feet 3 inches of water. She had a speed of 18 miles an hour and was built to carry 400 tons of freight. The sides of the vessel were flared outward to increase her strength should she take to the coastwise trade.

The main deck was devoted to freight, the quarters of the crew, room for 60 steerage passengers, and rooms for petty officers. The upper deck afforded staterooms and for observation on the decks outside the staterooms. The saloon deck extended the full length of the vessel. Parlors and 88 staterooms took up most of it. The dining room at the after part would seat 100 diners. The hurricane deck had a deckhouse and large observation lobby.

During the more than quarter century that she plowed the waters of the Hudson river she became widely known. She was also known as an excursion boat, and was very popular in bygone years. For years she made daily trips to Kingston docking in the Rondout creek, near the foot of Broadway.

INVESTIGATE THEFTS IN WOODSTOCK HOMES

An investigation is being made by Sergeant James Cunningham and Trooper Walter Keefe of an attempt to break into two properties at Woodstock. The home of Marion Bullard, which at present is not occupied by the owner, was entered by prying open windows. Nearby the property of Anna and Anita Dietz, school teachers, was also entered. Until they return to Woodstock from New York and a check-up is made the authorities cannot determine whether anything has been taken. Both properties are located back from the main highway some distance.

Is The Old West Dying Boys? Cowhands Ponder Sheik Question

COWBOYS MAY TRADE THIS

Real cowhands get up at 4 a. m. to wrangle calves. They're in the saddle from dawn to dusk, sometimes all night. They work hard, talk rough, have little time for romance. BUT...

By ROBERT GEIGER

(AP Feature Service Writer)

Cheyenne, Wyo. (AP)—If the moon shines bright, should a cowboy steal a kiss?

In a quiet nook, by a babbling brook, should he whisper: "I love you?" If an heiress thaws, should he turn her cold?

The wild and sometimes woolly west is choosing up sides over whether dude ranch cowboys, after wrestling steers all day, should spend their nights courting feminine greenhorns from the effete east.

"A how-legged cowboy was made for work, not romance," says Charles Beiden, dude rancher of Pitchfork, Wyo.

How Far To Go?

But Stow L. Witwer, president of the Colorado Dude & Guest Ranch Association, contends:

"Give the gals romance if they want it."

And there are the two sides of a question agitating the dude ranch industry: Just how far should a dude ranch go in giving service to its guests?

Witwer believes the ranch managers should provide anything a guest might request, from a pill for a stomach-ache to a good-looking cowboy to go with moonlit nights.

"It costs no more to hire good-looking cowboys to help entertain our feminine guests than it does to hire a tongue-tied one who knows how to toss a lasso," says Witwer.

"I speak from experience. A charming eastern girl came to the ranch and now she is Mrs. Witwer. Today she is one of the best dude ranch hostesses in the business."

Beiden, who has one of the largest dude ranches in the west, says Wyoming and not cowboys should provide the "atmosphere" for a dude ranch vacation.

FOR THIS

Some dude ranch owners think a v-shaped cowboy, properly attended, will attract more wealthy feminine guests. So "that old cowboy" may become a prairie forgo.

Costly and Inefficient

"Good cowboys are needed. In the summer they have the dudes to wrangle in addition to the spring and fall branding, dehorning and weaning of calves. A 'drug store' cowboy can't do it."

"The atmosphere idea is all right, maybe, but it runs up the overhead, decreases general efficiency and is just as out of place as a uniformed groom would be on a western ranch."

"A cowboy should be homely and weather beaten."

Paul Holmes of Encampment, who herds dudes and white-faced cattle in the Saratoga valley, said he has no place on his ranch for a cowboy who "can't punch cows."

"But a lot of Wyoming cowboys are just naturally good-looking," he added. "They have the v-figure, bronzed features and the healthy look."

that women go for. I recall that Ann Gould Meader went for one. There have been other heiresses who like them.

"I believe eastern women have good judgment. They can't be fooled by a fancy face with nothing behind it, no more than an ornery hoan can."

Public Hearing On System Changes

A public hearing will be held Thursday evening at the Port Ewen engine house for the purpose of authorizing certain changes in the proposed water system which it is expected will be built to supply the village with domestic supply as well as for fire protection.

The hearing is scheduled for 7:30 o'clock.

PREVIEWED

Today

Broadway: "The Holy Terror." Jane Withers sings, dances and gets into constant trouble in this musical tale of the navy and the show is a merry, unimportant little picture that is average entertainment for those who go into raptures over the antics of the child star. There are some well sung songs, some excitement when crooks try to exploit the naval department, some romance and a good, full dose of Jane Withers from start to finish. Essentially a comedy helped along with music, the supporting players include Leah Ray, Anthony Martin, El Brendel and Jow Lewis. A 20th Century-Fox film directed by James Tinling.

Kingston: "Smart Blonde" and "Under Cover of Night." The murder of a night club proprietor starts the action rolling in "Smart Blonde" and a detective and his newspaper girl friend solve the mystery after much trouble and difficulty and meaningless clues. Glenda Farrell, Barton McLane, Wini Shaw, Craig Reynolds, Addison Richards and Max Wagner head the players. A Warner Brothers "quickie" directed by Frank McDonald. "Under Cover of Night" is the associate feature, a grim mystery yarn well played by Edmund Lowe and Florence Rice.

Orpheum: "The Big Broadcast of 1937." The Hollywood idea of how a big broadcasting station is run is put on display at the Orpheum in one of those glittering song and dance vehicles so dear to the hearts of the movie producers. Alive with laughter, songs, comedy and dancing and headed by the popular Jack Benny, the show offers such talented players as Bob Burns, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Martha Raye, Shirley Ross, Ray Milland, Benny Fields, Eleanor Whitney, Leopold Stokowski and his orchestra and Benny Goodman and his band.

REAGLE HORN

Two Bouts in England for Baer, Best On 'The Boards'

Schmeling May Claim Heavy Title

New York, Feb. 24 (AP).—Students of thoroughbred breeding and performance adhere to the maxim that "class will tell" in a horse race, and expect the winner of Saturday's $100,000 Santa Anita handicap to be one of three proven distance runners—Time Supply, Rosemont or Mr. Bones.

F. A. Carraud's Time Supply, though raced seldom this winter, worked the Santa Anita distance of a mile and a quarter in an impressive 2:05 3-5 recently. Time Supply, now six years old, has won $144,560 during his racing career, more than any probable starter in the far west classic.

William du Pont, Jr.'s Rosemont also has confined his racing efforts to fast company, and demonstrated his fitness for the rich stake by winning the Santa Anita handicap at Santa Anita last Saturday. His racing time, 1:50 1-5 for a mile and an eighth, was not particularly impressive, but the victory doubtless made him ready for his best effort this week-end. Rosemont is five years old.

John H. Whitney's Mr. Bones, a four-year-old, failed in the Santa Anita, but the added distance of the Santa Anita handicap is expected to be to his liking. His best performance during the three-year-old campaign, when he pressed William Woodward's champion, Granville, vigorously in several route races, were at a mile and a quarter.

Time Supply has the best record in previous Santa Anita handicaps. He was third in the 1935 inaugural and second to A. A. Baroni's Top Row last year. Rosemont was third in last year's renewal. Mr. Bones will be making his first Santa Anita handicap start Saturday.

WRESTLING LAST NIGHT

(By The Associated Press)

New York—Rudy Duesch, 218, Omaha, Neb., threw Hank Barber, 221, Cambridge, Mass., 55-45.

Worcester, Mass.—Steve (Crusher) Carr, Ireland, defeated Martin Wenzelberg, Tacoma, Wash., two straight falls.

Newark, N. J.—Gino Garibaldi, 215, St. Louis, and Joe Cox, 223, lost at first, drew, one fall each.

New York, Feb. 24 (AP).—Max Adelbert Baer, who was ready to retire from the ring for good after dropping his heavyweight championship to Jim Braddock and then absorbing a beating from Joe Louis, was back in the midst of the fight argument today with two bouts waiting for him.

Max has contracts for a bout in England May 6 against either Ben Ford or Tommy Farr and for a bout here against Bob Pastor in Madison Square Garden March 19. He also has a British promoter, Brig. General Alfred Cecil Critchley, on hand to persuade him to go through with the London fight.

The affair may be settled at today's meeting of the New York State Athletic Commission, when the Pastor bout will come up for approval. Max was summoned for questioning about his often damaged hands and perhaps some other matters, before the New York solons would approve the match.

Britisher Bob Pastor
Meanwhile Critchley is demanding a showdown.
"Either Baer goes through with my offer or I'm through with him," he said. "I don't want any part of him if he fights Pastor. Personally, I think it's silly for him to fight Pastor. If he beats him, what has he gained? Nothing. If he loses, he's through."

"My agreement with Anell Hoffman (Baer's manager) was that Baer is not to engage in any fights before May 6. In fact, I've assured him two fights and he'll get $30,000 for each bout, plus limited expenses. The second will be against Walter Neusel."

Hoffman, cannily figuring on getting at least one good bout, inserted a clause in the Baer-Pastor contract requiring the Garden to obtain the New York commission's approval on February 10. So far as is known, that hasn't been given yet, so Max is free to decide either way. However, Critchley says he'll have to leave here March 3 if he's to make the London campaign.

Schmeling After Crown
While everyone concerned in the Braddock-Schmeling-Louis fight feud remained silent yesterday, reports were current that Braddock would be deprived of his title by the New York commission if he should fail to appear for the June 3 bout with Max Schmeling.

However, no action is due for some time. According to its regular procedure, the commission can't assume Braddock will not show up June 3.

It also was reported that Schmeling would lay claim to the crown if it was taken from Braddock. In that case Max probably would be matched with the best available heavyweight and the winner recognized in New York as champion. Even then it wouldn't have much, if any, effect on the Braddock-Louis Chicago bout.

All-Star Card at The Garden, Friday

Five six round bouts have been assembled to back up the 15 round bout between Pedro Montanez, the classy Puerto Rican lightweight, and Enrico Venturi, the European champion, in Madison Square Garden on Friday night. The line-up includes some of the best fighters in the country and the fans are in for a fine treat. Wesley Ramey, the clever Michigan lightweight, is scheduled to meet Carl Guggino, the hard hitting scrapper from Tampa, Fla., and that bout alone ought to furnish enough excitement to satisfy the most exacting customer.

In another six, Frankie Blair, the Camden welterweight, will tackle the veteran Paul Walker, welterweight from Trenton. Al Casimiri, the Corona slugger, will mix with Albert Synott, the Fall River light-heavyweight. In another special six-round, and again there is every prospect of a knockout.

Then there is a six round jam between Irish Eddie Duane, protege of Benny Leonard, former lightweight king, and Frankie Rocanti, the hard hitting Italian lightweight. This will be a return engagement. They fought a draw several months ago. In the final six, Joey Wach will face Vince Dell'Orto, hard hitting featherweight.

Of course, the big 15 round bout between Enrico Venturi and Pedro Montanez, is getting a great play from the fans. One of the best matches ever made between lightweights it is bound to be a sizzling battle all the way.

Tickets are on sale daily at Madison Square Garden.

GREGORY MANGIN

THE PERENNIAL NATIONAL INDOOR TENNIS CHAMPION

HE IS READY TO DEFEND THE INDOOR CROWN HE HAS WON FOUR TIMES IN FIVE YEARS

MANGIN IS RANKED NO. 1 ON THE EASTERN LIST - NATIONALLY HE RANKS FIFTH

ALL RIGHTS RESERVED BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

His greatest asset is speed - he breaks tennis racquets by the dozen

Gregory Mangin, perennial national indoor tennis singles champion, is not likely to win a berth on the Davis cup team and play in the inter-zone finals abroad. He is still a master on the hard-board floors where his speed and high-bouncing style of play are ideal. But his outdoor game has never matched his indoor style.

Mangin has won the undercovert title four times in five years. There doesn't seem to be anyone in this year's tournament capable of threatening him. Speed has always been Mangin's greatest asset. His added weight has slowed him down but not enough to make him easy.

Mangin's battle against Old Man Weight is constant. He has a personal masseur who routs him out of bed at 7:15 for a workout. His attendant treats him before and after each practice.

Business Champ
The indoor king has been successful in business. He can afford this attention. He lives in an expensive east side New York penthouse.

To any other player the cost of the racquets Mangin uses would be terrific. He averages something like 48 racquet-strings a year. It is common to see Mangin come out for a match with four bats under his arm. He needs them. It is not unusual for him to break two or three during a match. His racquets are strong exceptingly tight.

Jones May Be Tough
Mangin came close to realizing his Davis cup ambitions when he was chosen for the squad that engaged Canada in zone play. However, he did not play.

He was ranked No. 1 for 1936 by the Eastern L. T. A. largely on the strength of the indoor title. Nationally he was No. 5.

A glance over the entries for the national indoor tournament shows only one player who might give Mangin a fight. He is Davey Jones, former Columbia U. ace.

Jones has been abroad the past several seasons and last year made quite an impression on the European critics. He is a big fellow with a powerful, high-bouncing serve that is extremely difficult to handle.

May Join School Pal With the Senators
Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 24 (AP).—If Freddie Sington, the former Alabama football great, comes anywhere near expectations in spring training, he will join a former high school teammate in the Washington Senators' outfield.

The other half of the combination, Ben Chapman, is no confident big Freddie will make the grade he has asked Sington to make his roommate for the 1937 season.

The two played for Phillips High School here in 1927, but neither was an outfielder. Sington was a fireball pitcher, and Chapman a sensation at third base.

Chapman lost little time in making his mark in baseball. In 1930, a few months before Sington's closing college football season, he was a regular with the New York Yankees and has been an established star since.

Lincoln, Neb.—Abe Coleman, 215, New York, and Steve Savage, 220, Chicago (Coleman disqualified for pushing referee out of ring).

Springvale, Me.—Charlie Gordon, Newport, Vt., technically knocked out by Joey Silva, New Bedford, Mass., (6).

Liberty Won Four
Liberty has coupled four of its last five league bouts in decisive fashion and is still very much in the running with a greatly revamped lineup. Coach Bill Ross has done a lot of shuffling with the Indians since they appeared in Kingston on an ill-fated point and are far more formidable as a result. The Rossmen lineup with Don Mashbrook, brother of Fred, and Captain Bud Howell at the forwards. Mashbrook conquered his scholastic indolence and has been a tower of strength at the right forward slot since the new term opened. Fred Mashbrook, sensational rookie center, has recovered his high scoring ways after a scoring slump and will take plenty of stoppage by Tommy Malone. Smiling Ted Kilecia, shifted back from his forward slot, and Charley Benton form the guards. Kilecia has been seeing the attack from his new berth and the Libertaines are playing a much improved brand of ball. Chuck Wedard, another former indolence, Larry Crook and Benson form the relief brigade.

Kingston finished brilliant sharp-shooting and floor play against a determined Newburgh quintet and pulled the iron man stunt on the Goosemen. For the first time this season, Coach Kias kept his starting quintet intact all the way and Captain Bahl and his cohorts came through in fine style. Ross, Howland, Malone, Bahl and Ferial combined to simply outpace the boroughers all the way in the best exhibition of team play shown this year. All

Liberty won four of its last five league bouts in decisive fashion and is still very much in the running with a greatly revamped lineup. Coach Bill Ross has done a lot of shuffling with the Indians since they appeared in Kingston on an ill-fated point and are far more formidable as a result. The Rossmen lineup with Don Mashbrook, brother of Fred, and Captain Bud Howell at the forwards. Mashbrook conquered his scholastic indolence and has been a tower of strength at the right forward slot since the new term opened. Fred Mashbrook, sensational rookie center, has recovered his high scoring ways after a scoring slump and will take plenty of stoppage by Tommy Malone. Smiling Ted Kilecia, shifted back from his forward slot, and Charley Benton form the guards. Kilecia has been seeing the attack from his new berth and the Libertaines are playing a much improved brand of ball. Chuck Wedard, another former indolence, Larry Crook and Benson form the relief brigade.

Kingston finished brilliant sharp-shooting and floor play against a determined Newburgh quintet and pulled the iron man stunt on the Goosemen. For the first time this season, Coach Kias kept his starting quintet intact all the way and Captain Bahl and his cohorts came through in fine style. Ross, Howland, Malone, Bahl and Ferial combined to simply outpace the boroughers all the way in the best exhibition of team play shown this year. All

Game Association
To Hear Hopkins

A. S. Hopkins of the Conservation Department will address the meeting of the Ulster County Fish and Game Protective Association to be held in the council chamber, city hall, on Thursday, February 25, at 8 p. m. Mr. Hopkins has charge of the purchasing of the lands and rights of way secured by the state for public hunting and fishing and he will be prepared to tell the sportsmen of the city and county something about the operation of this department. On account of the large amount of land which has been and is being posted by the land owners against hunting and fishing, this topic should be a very interesting one to the sportsmen of this vicinity. Accompanying Mr. Hopkins will be Earl G. McCullough, who has charge of the motion pictures sponsored and released by the department. He will bring with him a projector and a number of sound films which he will show after the business meeting. As it is impossible to determine before hand what pictures he will be able to show, the titles of the films which will be shown at this meeting are not available.

An outline of the plans and activities of this association, which will be put into effect, if possible, for the ensuing year will be outlined at this meeting. Many plans have been formulated for the betterment of hunting and fishing in this vicinity, but cannot be accomplished without the wholehearted cooperation of the sportsmen. The problem of providing hunting and fishing rights and privileges for the ever increasing number of sportsmen is a very grave one and one which requires immediate action by the sportsmen if they are to enjoy this sport, except in very limited capacities. This problem has been worked out with a great deal of satisfaction in other states and it is our belief that it can be worked out here, if the sportsmen desire it and will cooperate.

The association is in contact with a person who has had a great deal of success with a plan which is in operation in several states, whereby hunting and fishing privileges have been secured on properties which formerly had been closed. It is not known at this time if this plan can be successfully operated here, but the opinion of the officers of this association is that it can be.

Another important question which will be open for discussion at this meeting will be the addition of Article 2 to Section 150 of the Conservation Laws which will authorize the conservation commissioner from time to time, having due regard to the distribution, abundance, economic value and breeding habits of birds, fish and quadrupeds, to determine where and to what extent, if at all, and by what means, it is compatible with the protection and preservation of such wildlife to allow hunting, taking, capturing, killing, possession, sale, purchase, shipment, transportation, carriage or export of any fish, bird or quadruped or any part, nest or egg thereof and to adopt suitable regulations permitting or governing the same. This proposed bill has been carefully analyzed by many of the sportsmen's associations as well as by the New York State Conservation Council, and it is their belief and opinion that this measure will go far to correct some recent evils of the present existing law. Notably on this point is "possession" of improperly sized fish or game made illegal under the present existing law many have enjoyed conviction because of failure to prove "taking" or "sale".

Commissioner Lathrop Osborne stated, in his talk to the sportsmen at the meeting which he attended here in January, "That there was only one way by which he could reach the sportsmen, which was, through sportsmen's organizations. This meeting will be open to all sportsmen or those interested in sports and it is the desire of the officers of this association that as many sportsmen as possible take advantage of this opportunity by attending. Sportsmen and sportsmen will be present for the promotion of better hunting and fishing in Ulster county, United.

TOURISTS FLOCK TO
ACADIAN COUNTRY

New Highway Opens Up Romantic Settlement.

New Iberia, La.—With the recent conversion of the Old Spanish Trail into a modern highway across lower Louisiana, the Acadian country, in the south central section of the state, which long has been hidden from the outside world, is becoming a magnet to motor tourists from all sections of the United States, as well as Canada, according to Edward A. McIlhenny, president of the Evangeline Scenic association.

"The Acadian country, which extends over most of the Vermilion, St. Mary, St. Martin and Iberia parishes of Louisiana, provides an entirely new picture to motor tourists, as it is different from any other section on the continent," Mr. McIlhenny said. "The tourists find a land little changed in 150 years. The inhabitants are, for the most part, descendants of the Acadians who were exiled from Nova Scotia by the British in 1765, and whose traditions, customs and language have been maintained throughout the intervening two centuries. Many of the native women in the Acadian towns of New Iberia, Franklin, Jeanerette, Abbeville and St. Martinville, still use spinning wheels and handlooms to make clothes for their families.

"At St. Martinville, the scene of one of America's most romantic love stories, immortalized by Longfellow, are 'Evangeline's Oak' and the tomb of Evangeline, the chief shrines of the Acadians, on the famed Bayou Teche.

"It is the purpose of the Evangeline Scenic association, which is composed of citizens and civic groups in the four parishes, to preserve not only the natural beauty of this picturesque region, as well as the old landmarks and buildings, but also to perpetuate the customs and language of the 'Cajuns,' as the Acadians are colloquially known."

Plane Bombing Crews May
Navigate by Stars Soon

London.—The new bombers now being built for Britain's expanding air force may be flown by crews trained in the use of astronomical aids to navigation as well as in the more usual methods of finding the way through the air.

Greatly increased cruising speeds, longer ranges, the ability to operate at heights of 20,000 feet and more, and the untrustworthiness of radio bearings in time of war demand something more than "dead reckoning," officials believe.

Hence the need for development of navigation by the stars, which has led to production of a satisfactory form of bubble sextant and to the devising of simple methods of making the required mathematical calculations.

British bombing planes are fitted with the automatic pilot, which simplifies astronomical navigation because it insures that, whether the horizon may be visible or not, the aircraft may be maintained in flight on a level keel.

So equipped, the bomber affords an excellent platform for the taking of sights, and experts believe that a high standard of accuracy in astronomical navigation is attainable.

Indian Banker's Auto of Gold Is Given Replating

London.—An all gold automobile, built 17 years ago, which has taken six months and $7,250 to repair and renovate, has left England on its return to its owner, an Indian banker.

Every visible part of the car is gold plated, gold painted or finished in gold leaf—even to the under parts. The gold leafing had to be done by a Birmingham expert, and immense care had to be taken in packing the car, as a scratched panel might have cost $1,000 to renew.

The interior woodwork is of Indian satinwood. Much of this had to be replaced because of damage by red ants.

Fruit Cake of Colonial
Days Is Found in Grave

Rochester.—A blackberry cake, baked by an Iroquois squaw during pre-Revolutionary days, is being exhibited by the Rochester Municipal museum.

The cake, now deteriorated to a mass of berry seeds, but still holding its original shape, was taken from the grave of an Iroquois brave, according to the museum's assistant archeologist, William A. Ritchie. The cake was discovered in a closed copper kettle, which Ritchie said explained its long preservation.

Washington Great
Because He Had a
High Sense of Duty

The traditional stories regarding General George Washington, whether they be true or false, have nothing to do with the real greatness of the man, John E. Harrison, of Poughkeepsie, told the members of the Kingston Lions Club Monday night at their regular meeting at the Governor Clinton Hotel. He added that Washington's title to greatness is due to the fact that he had such a high sense of duty to his country and to his fellowmen—and that he not only knew his duty, but did it.

Mr. Harrison, who is deputy district governor of Zone R of the Lions Club, gave an address that is spoken of very highly, as not only appropriate to the occasion, Washington's Birthday, but also because of its general subject matter and excellence of delivery.

In closing the speaker emphasized the necessity of the members working together, as an organization and towards the aims all had agreed upon. Individual activities did not necessarily make an organization effective, he said; it is the members working together as a whole that counts.

The local club is continuing its work for the blind and has recently aided two children suffering from defective eyesight, in one case an operation having been found necessary.

NAZARENES HELD RALLY ON WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

On Washington's Birthday a group of 17 from Kingston attended the all-day Nazarene zone rally of young people and Sunday school. There were several practical and informative addresses. The congregational singing accompanied by various instruments, and the special vocal selections were very inspiring.

The principal speaker of the day was the president of the Eastern Nazarene College who had with him the official male quartet of the college. Both the sermons by Dr. Williamson and the songs by the quartet will long be remembered by those who had the privilege of hearing these talented men. The Kingston pastor of the Church of the Nazarenes, the Rev. H. H. Williams, took pride in capturing for the second consecutive time the banner awarded for the largest number present and coming the longest distance.

The next rally will be held with the Kingston Church on Memorial Day, May 30.

Walls of Ancient Forts
Stand Guard Over City

Early in its reign as the Queen City of the Caribbean, Cartagena was strongly fortified. Historians have estimated that the walls about the port cost half a billion dollars in time, labor and loss of life. When Ferdinand VI of Spain was presented with the accounts of the building of the great fortifications he is reported to have climbed to the top of the tower of his castle and to have peered long and wistfully toward the west. When courtiers inquired as to what he was seeking he replied:

"I am trying to see the walls of Cartagena, because such a tremendous expenditure should have created such a conspicuous architecture that it ought to be visible from here."

The old forts of San Jose and San Fernando guard the mouth of the river leading up to Cartagena, while those off Manzanillo and Castillo Grande are attractive old sentinels closer to the city. All these ports were effectively used against pirates in the olden days. The channel from the sea runs a zigzag course for several miles through low jungle-grown banks to a beautiful land-locked bay, where Cartagena looms beyond a lagoon, compact within its encircling ramparts and topped by mosque-like domes and Moorish towers, looking much as it did in the days of the buccaneers. Many of the buildings date back to 1533.

Early Printed Books

Oswald's "History of Printing" begins by stating that Fifteenth-century books printed from movable type are considered to be of sufficient importance to justify their designation by a special title, that of "incunabula," "cradle books" or books produced in the infancy of the art. During the fifty years comprising the latter half of the Fifteenth century, probably 30,000 editions under various titles were printed, of which about 23,000 editions have been identified and described. These early editions appear to have numbered not more than a few hundred copies.

Kangaroo a Broad Jumper

A kangaroo is a broad jumper, rather than a high jumper. Some of the biggest ones are said to cover from 10 to 20 feet at a leap, while claims have been made of leaps of 30 feet and more. He does not jump high from the ground. The largest kangaroos weigh nearly two hundred pounds. The long tail aids the animal in leaping and helps it keep its balance.
